Instructional Unit: Practice and Projects

8

- This unit should be used for application and consolidation of material studied in SPN 1120. It allows for expanded writing assignments and / or student projects and presentations, such as those contained in the final pages of each instructional unit. It also allows for the expansion of previously introduced cultural themes.
- Additional Activities and Review: Additional activities are at the discretion of the instructor. They may include readings (in the text or from other sources) and other classroom proficiency-oriented activities.
- Supportive language lab exercises are provided for each topic to be accomplished by students on an individual basis in the language lab.

Instructional Unit: Review and Testing

8

- This unit should be used for periodic reviews, quizzes and exams.
- The FINAL EXAM is DEPARTMENTAL and is worth 25% of the students final grade.

SPN 1120 COLLEGE - LEVEL ACADEMIC SKILLSI. COURSE FOCUS

This course involves some or all of the following teaching strategies:

- A. Presentation of new material orally, for repetition and control;
- B. Use of visuals and total physical response (TPR) activities as aids in comprehension and recall;
- C. Reinforcement of correct pronunciation habits established during initial lessons;
- D. Gradual development of the ability to create and write sentences and brief, simple paragraphs using learned material;
- E. Treatment of grammar as vocabulary, with a gradual increase in the complexity of the grammatical structures;
- F. Gradually increasing emphasis on individual oral response instead of group repetition and response;
- G. Reinforcement of audio-lingual skills in laboratory sessions;
- H. Elicitation of both oral and written student responses to questions and / or prompts;
- I. Emphasis on listening and reading comprehension and the use of course materials in direct discourse, which involves asking questions, making appropriate responses and volunteering information.

II. COURSE GOALS

The following general performance goals will be addressed in the course, based on the national standards scale set by the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL). These categories are directly parallel to those in the performance objectives described in detail with outcome measures in section IV (see attached document).

- A. Listening (oral comprehension), at the Novice-High proficiency level.
- B. Speaking, at the Novice-High proficiency level.
- C. Reading, at the Intermediate-Low proficiency level.
- D. Writing, at the Novice-High proficiency level.
- E. Attitudinal/Culture, at the Intermediate-Low level.

More specifically, the student should be able to perform the following functions at the targeted levels as described in the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines. These functions are elaborated upon in the performance objectives detailed with outcome measures in section IV.

- Understand predictable questions and commands in familiar topic areas;
- Understand speech on familiar topics at normal speeds;
- Interact orally on familiar topics;
- Use language for personal communication needs, ask and answer questions, request clarification as needed;
- Deal with familiar survival situations and interact with those accustomed to communication with foreigners;
- Understand written documents dealing with basic needs or interests;
- Meet basic writing/recording needs such as short messages, postcards, etc.;
- Identify certain important people, holidays, nationalities, languages, and geographical areas of the target culture;
- Demonstrate an interest in the study of the target language and in the culture and areas in which the target language is spoken.

III. COURSE EVALUATION

A. Successful proficiency in the target language upon the completion of this course should range from Novice-Mid to Novice-High on the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines. Assessment of performance in the course will be based on the student's proficiency as demonstrated in as many of the evaluation methods listed below as the individual instructor deems appropriate.

B. Suggested methods of evaluation:

1. Establish evaluation as a continuing and developing process, formative in nature, practiced as frequently as class and laboratory sessions are held, with proficiency in the target language representing the final outcome in student performance.
2. Emphasize correct pronunciation, smoothness, and intonation in oral reading and conversational sessions.
3. Check listening comprehension for gist, main idea, and/or specific information from a variety of input, including authentic video and/or audiotapes, textbook or instructor-prepared materials. Listening comprehension activities can also check for control of appropriate vocabulary, structure, and culture.
4. Have students interact orally in pairs, small groups, one-on-one interviews with the instructor, and/or have them make oral presentations. These oral activities should allow for control on a variety but limited number of topics and should allow for some limited creativity and recombination of learned material.

III. COURSE EVALUATION (CONTINUED)

5. Provide authentic reading materials in the target language with which to check comprehension and application of information gleaned from documents. Emphasis should be on strategies for skimming for main idea and scanning for specific information.
6. Consider meaningful written material, with emphasis on message as well as on syntax. Short writing tasks that in each case represent a whole in themselves, such as notes, messages, postcards and letters, should be used to evaluate functional use of learned material as well as to check spelling, sentence order, sentence structure, and punctuation. Written material may also include brief dictation exercises, brief answers to questions, written words in completion statements, personalized rejoinders in completion of open-ended statements, closed paragraphs, and adaptations of given paragraphs. These written activities should allow for control of a variety but limited number of topics and should allow for some limited creativity and recombination of learned material.
7. Provide opportunities for growth in attitudes about the importance of effective communication in an increasingly global society, about the cultures of those who speak the language studied and its effect on the world, and in appreciation of the contributions to society of other languages and cultures. The geography, history, and political contributions of the target culture are appropriate areas to be addressed.

IV. PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES

The descriptions set forth in the latest ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines are the general descriptive guidelines to be used for global assessment of the four basic skills of listening, speaking, reading and writing. It is expected that upon the student's completion of the course, his/her performance will be in the Novice stage of proficiency, minimally at the Novice-Mid level but preferably at the Novice-High level, with some peaking into the Intermediate-Low range for certain skills, namely reading.

- A. The student's listening comprehension performance will be satisfactory if he/she is able to do at least one of the following:
 1. Interact understandably in a prescribed number of chats on familiar topics;
 2. Exhibit understanding of main ideas and some details of connected discourse on a number of familiar topics;
 3. Perform satisfactorily on a listening proficiency test appropriate for beginners who are completing one semester of instruction, or
 4. Respond accurately to at least 70% of short-answer questions asked about very familiar topics. For example, the questions may be taped or presented live, either by the instructor or by another student in the presence of the instructor; or there may be written questions based on the limited-vocabulary dramatizations or monologues to which the students listen in a testing situation.
- B. The student's speaking performance will be satisfactory if he/she is able to give orally and understandably in the target language the most frequently-used greetings and farewells as well as to do one or more of the following:
 1. Participate understandably in a prescribed number of chats on familiar topics;
 2. Give, with the aid of pictures or drawings, orally and understandably from memory, a prescribed number of narrations (monologues); or

IV. PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES (CONTINUED)

3. Perform understandably and from memory one's role in each of a prescribed number of dialogues, with the aid of pictures, drawings, or props, if appropriate;
 4. Present any combination of dialogues and monologues, as described in (2) and (3), to make a prescribed total number of presentations;
 5. Perform satisfactorily on an oral proficiency test or speaking competency test appropriate for beginners who are completing one semester of instruction; or
 6. Give oral, understandable, and accurate sentence responses to at least 70% of the short-answer questions asked about very familiar topics.
- C. The student's reading performance will be satisfactory if he/she is able to demonstrate understanding of main ideas and some details of authentic texts in familiar areas of high interest by responding accurately to at least 70% of the short-answer questions asked about the limited vocabulary selection(s) given to be read during the reading evaluation process.
- D. The student's writing performance will be satisfactory if he/she completes provided writing tasks in such a way that his/her written communication may be fully understood by the instructor, after consultation and rewriting as necessary.
- E. The student's attitudinal/cultural performance will be satisfactory if he/she participates, sometimes actively, sometimes as an observer and listener, in at least seven-tenths of the oral and cultural learning activities planned and carried out for the purposes of group instruction (with provision for supplementary and/or substitute activities at the discretion of the instructor); and if they persevere to complete the course.

ACTFL PROFICIENCY GUIDELINES

The 1986 proficiency guidelines developed by the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL) with grants from the U.S. Department of Education represent a hierarchy of global characterizations of integrated performance in speaking, listening, reading and writing. Each description is a representative, not exhaustive, sample of a particular range of ability and each level subsumes all previous levels, moving from simple to complex in an "all-before-and-more" fashion.

SPEAKINGNovice-Mid

Oral production continues to consist of isolated words and learned phrases within very predictable areas of need, although quantity is increased. Vocabulary is sufficient only for handling simple, elementary needs and expressing basic courtesies. Utterances rarely consist of more than two or three words and show frequent long pauses and repetition of interlocutor's words. Speaker may have some difficulty producing even the simplest utterances. Some Novice-Mid speakers will be understood only with great difficulty.

ACTFL PROFICIENCY GUIDELINES (CONTINUED)Novice-High

Able to satisfy partially the requirements of basic communicative exchanges by relying heavily on learned utterances but occasionally expanding these through simple recombination of their elements. Can ask questions or make statements involving learned material. Shows signs of spontaneity although this falls short of real autonomy of expression. Speech continues to consist of learned utterances rather than of personalized, situationally adapted ones. Vocabulary centers on areas such as basic objects, places, and most common kinship terms. Pronunciation may still be strongly influenced by first language. Errors are frequent and, in spite of repetition, some Novice-High speakers will have difficulty being understood even by sympathetic interlocutors.

LISTENINGNovice-Mid

Able to understand some short, learned utterances, particularly where context strongly supports understanding and speech is clearly audible. Comprehends some words and phrases from simple questions, statements, high-frequency commands and courtesy formulae about topics that refer to basic personal information or the immediate physical setting. The listener requires long pauses for assimilation and periodically requests repetition and/or a slower rate of speech.

Novice-High

Able to understand short, learned utterances and some sentence-length utterances, particularly where context strongly supports understanding and speech is clearly audible. Comprehends words and phrases from simple questions, statements, high-frequency commands, and courtesy formulae. May require repetition, rephrasing, and/or a slowed rate of speech for comprehension.

READINGNovice-High

Has sufficient control of the writing system to interpret written language in areas of practical need. Where vocabulary has been learned, can read for instructional and directional purposes, standardized messages, phrases, or expressions, such as some items on menus, schedules, timetables, maps, and signs. At times, but not on a consistent basis, the Novice-High level reader may be able to derive meaning from material at a slightly higher level where context and/or extra linguistic background knowledge are supportive.

Intermediate-Low

Able to understand the main ideas of most speech in a standard dialect; however, the listener may not be able to sustain comprehension in extended discourse which is propositionally and linguistically complex. Listener shows an emerging awareness of culturally implied meanings beyond the surface meanings of the text but may fail to grasp sociocultural nuances of the message.

WRITING

Novice-Mid

Able to copy or transcribe familiar words or phrases and reproduce some from memory. No practical communicative writing skills.

Novice-High

Able to write simple, fixed expressions and limited memorized material and some recombinations thereof. Can supply information on simple forms and documents. Can write names, numbers, dates, own nationality, and other simple autobiographical information, as well as some short phrases and simple lists. Can write all the symbols in an alphabetic or syllabic system or 50-100 characters or compounds in a character writing system. Spelling and representation of symbols (letters, syllables, characters) may be partially correct.
